

Grievance Redressal Committee

About

The Grievance Redressal Committee (GRC) is a pivotal component of CommonHealth's commitment to maintaining fair and equitable participation opportunities for all its members. This committee is specifically designed to address and resolve individual grievances that may arise within the CommonHealth coalition. The primary objective of the GRC is to offer an accessible mechanism for the settlement of grievances, whether expressed in written or verbal form.

The GRC plays a crucial role in reinforcing CommonHealth's dedication to treating all members equally, irrespective of their individual or institutional status. The committee aims to foster an environment where the dignity of each member is respected, and no discriminatory remarks are made based on social class, caste, age, ability, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital status, family situation, ethnic origins, linguistic identity, religious beliefs, or any other markers of personal identity or marginal status.

This grievance mechanism is an internal process, providing a clear and transparent framework to address any disputes or grievances that deviate from the values upheld by CommonHealth. Both written and verbal expressions of grievances are considered valid within this procedure, and the committee conducts inquiries to address and resolve these issues.

In essence, the Grievance Redressal Committee serves as a cornerstone in upholding the values and principles of CommonHealth, ensuring that members have a fair and effective platform to address any concerns they may have within the coalition.
